

<http://www.gq.com/style/blogs/the-gq-eye/2010/06/dress-like-a-pro-young-man.html>

Dress Like A Pro, Young Man

ON JUNE 23, 2010 AT 2:50 PM

6
tweets
retweet

It seems there's been something of a style renaissance taking place within the professional basketball ranks of late, and hopefully NCAA athletes have taken note. In preparation for tomorrow night's NBA Draft, the Sean John store on 5th Avenue held a private suit fitting for some of the top members of the incoming draft class, including lottery-pick locks DeMarcus Cousins, Evan Turner, Wesley Johnson, Ed Davis, and Greg Monroe. "This is the most exciting time in my life right now. I really don't know where I'm going to go," says Cousins, the soon-to-be former Kentucky Wildcat, although he added that he hopes it's somewhere in the first handful of selections. When asked if he'll continue to wear his signature headband in the NBA, he left no doubt: "Oh yeah. We got to have swagger in what we do." Well said, young'un. But while Sean John handed out suits and swag to the rooks, the most coveted Draft Day accessory is something even Puffy can't give away: a team cap handed over by a short Jewish man, named David Stern.

